Section 108: United States Copyright Law

The copyright law of the United States (Title 17, United States Code) governs the making of photocopies or other reproductions of copyrighted materials. Under certain conditions specified by law, libraries and archives are authorized to furnish a photocopy or other reproduction. One of these specified conditions is that the photocopy or reproduction is not to be “used for any purpose other than private study, scholarship, or research.” If a user makes a request for, or later uses, a photocopy or reproduction for purposes in excess of “fair use,” that user may be liable for copyright infringement. This institution reserves the right to refuse to accept a copying order, if, in its judgment, fulfillment of the order would involve violation of the copyright law.

Responsible Use of Electronic Resources

Electronic journals, books, databases, and multimedia are intellectual property protected by the U.S. Copyright Law. The University negotiates licenses to provide current faculty, staff and students with access to electronic resources for research, clinical care and teaching. The licenses are legal contracts. Licenses prohibit systematic downloading or redistribution of content and any commercial use of resources. Publishers/vendors routinely monitor use of their online products to protect their intellectual property. Individual users are responsible for any consequences arising from the violation of a licensing agreement or applicable copyright laws.
